Richard Crockett was born in Michigan, now lives in Bainbridge, WA and began painting in the 70's after taking a class in local architecture in the San Francisco area. His work consists primarily of watercolor or acrylic landscapes, though he has experimented with oil and pastel techniques.

Rich tries to capture the relationship of architecture to the environment and to people in his paintings. His work has been exhibited in Merchantville and Cape May, New Jersey, and, more recently, in Bremerton, Washington.

Richard has contributed to the following Healing Art Works, Inc. Projects:
