

Doris Goodill

Doris received her first camera, a Kodak brownie, when she was 8 years old. She has had a camera in her hands ever since. When she purchased her first Nikon SLR in the 1970's, she discovered photography as a way to capture, in a more creative way, the beauty she saw around her. Her attempts at drawing and painting had not been satisfying for her, so learning to use the SLR opened up an art form she didn't know existed. Color photography is her medium and recently, with the digital format cameras and the editing programs, her passion for creative expression

Doris has contributed to the following Healing Art Works, Inc. Projects:

Project 2008 - American Cancer Society Hope Lodge

using her photography has grown. Over the years she has entered photography contests and exhibited in many venues. She has received recognition at these events in San Jose, CA, as well as here in San Luis Obispo. Currently, as a member of the San Luis Obispo Art Museum, she exhibits at local businesses, through their city wide program. Expressing creativity in all its forms and encouraging creativity in others is her current focus.
